

‘Magic’ pressure washer bridges the gap between commercial and domestic

Australian Pump Industries (API) recognised the need for a compact, powerful and portable pressure cleaner that offered professional performance without breaking the bank. So, they created the so-called ‘magic’ Aussie Black Box.

This new single-phase, high-pressure washer bridges the gap between domestic-style two-pole pressure cleaners—which are much lighter, but less durable—and the much more expensive commercial four-pole machines. It’s a pro machine for the price of a top-of-the-line hobby device.

“The Black Box is an ideal portable pressure cleaner for the cleaning industry. It’s compact, easy to store and ready to go anytime,” said API’s product manager Steve Burns. “No fuel, no fuss. Of course, it is not designed for cleaning the Harbour Bridge, but for small clean-ups or where noise is an issue, this is a normal 10-A ‘plug and go’ blaster.”

Ideal for tradies and commercial wash down applications, the Black Box is powered by a 2.6-kW, 1450-RPM, slow-speed four-pole induction motor with integrated thermal protection. It delivers 2,000 PSI and 8-lpm flow.

The pump end is a close-coupled triplex pump made to the highest European standards. It includes ceramic pistons, a brass head and an integrated pressure gauge and thermal dump, the latter of which protects the machine from being run continuously with the gun shut.

Each Black Box includes a high-quality 8-m wire braid hose, pro gun, Vario lance and bonus turbo lance. The Vario lance enables the operator to adjust the spray angle and the pressure of the jet from high to low with a twist of the wrist. The bonus turbo lance increases the pump pressure to 3,400 PSI and is ideal for stubborn stain removal.

Optional accessories include the three-nozzle Aussie Tri-Kleener for fast cleaning of paths and kerbs, as well as a specially configured, two-wheel steel trolley that can be fitted with a hose reel and 15-m wire braid hose.
